Save the Date: Career Connections Lunch

With today’s expanding industries and growing number of individuals entering the job market, networking has become an increasingly popular and important opportunity for many young adults. Through networking and gaining insight and knowledge from professionals, students learn ways to succeed in their industry that may not have been taught in the classroom. Upon beginning college, many young women are still searching for the perfect career path. By building connections with other women currently working in the field, students can begin to develop stronger goals. The Women’s Giving Circle and the Office of Experiential Learning and Career Management is happy to announce the launch of a Career Connections lunch. On November 6, 2014, Exploratory freshman and sophomore female students can begin to develop stronger goals. The Women’s Giving Circle is looking for female alumnae to participate. Your participation will encourage the development of the students’ professional and personal aspirations and affirm the important contributions of women in both the professional world and the Millersville University community. If you are interested in being part of this important opportunity or would like additional information, please contact Alice McMurry at 717-872-3820 or alice.mcmurry@millersville.edu.

Call us at: 717-872-3820 or toll-free 877-872-3820
Mail form to: Millersville University, Development Office P.O. Box 1002, Millersville, PA 17551-0302

Already a member? Share this with a friend.

Millersville University Development Office
P.O. Box 1002
Millersville, PA 17551-0302

“Our you only given one life, one chance at fully living it… take risks, believe in your dreams, explore the world and her people, live out loud!”

– Danell Lynn

www.millersville.edu/give
The President’s Commission on the Status of Women celebrated its 15th anniversary with a full-day retreat on April 9 with the theme “Empowering Women to Look Back and Move Forward.” Sessions included topics such as how body image/self-talk impact women’s lives and how local community organizations and governments can promote equality for women. The goal of the year’s retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

For Jayme Siegel ’92, who chaired the commission, being a part of the Commission was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.

“I choose Millersville University because of its convenient location from my home, the affordable tuition and the fact that they offered a Social Work program,” said Trogus, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. “I was an easy decision. “Advocating for a climate that promotes full opportunities for women has been a strong passion of mine since taking my first Women’s Studies course during my undergraduate career at Millersville,” said Siegel, who is also the director for the Center of Health Education and Promotion. Her position on campus is unique, as she is able to engage students and faculty alike to address important issues. One of her most memorable moments from being on the Commission came at the fall 2013 retreat aligned directly with the goals and mission of the Commission on the Status of Women: to promote full and equal opportunities for women to study work and live in an environment free of harassment and discrimination.