MILLERSVILLE REVIEW

For Alumni and Friends of Millersville University

Extending the learning experience

When it comes to learning, the classroom is only the beginning. In this issue, the Review looks beyond the classroom, at other experiences that educate and motivate students. Whether participating in a club that promotes better business management or studying the native flora and fauna in the rugged landscape of Big Bend National Park, University students have many opportunities to pursue their interests both in and out of the classroom.

Update, Capital Campaign

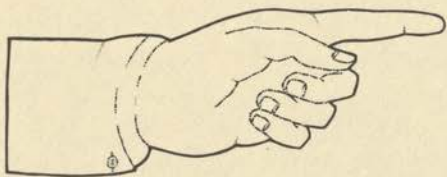

Students earned money toward the senior gift by staging the first ever MU oozeball tournament.

Five months after the official public announcement of Commit to Opportunity: The Campaign for Millersville University, the capital campaign is right on track and surging forward. For an update on the campaign's progress, see the insert between pages 16 and 17 of this issue.

Help point an MU student toward a great career.

A career choice can be a tough decision to make. You can make it easier by sharing your invaluable experience and expertise with an MU student.

Hook up with the Alumni Network. You can help through such programs as:

- Informational interviews
- "Shadowing" opportunities
- Mentoring
- Internships
- Co-Ops

To give an MU student a helping hand at a critical time, just fill out the Alumni Network questionnaire. You'll find it after page 32. Fold it and tape it, and mail the postage paid form.

Your help will make a big difference in our students' lives.

AROUND THE CAMPUS

BRICKS AND MORTAR

Official event kicks off campaign

Capital Campaign Chairperson Herman Armstrong (at lectern) and President Joseph Caputo preside at the introduction of the campaign cabinet during the January 30 event, officially launching Commit to Opportunity: The Campaign for Millersville University. For more information about the campaign, see the update in this issue, between pages 16 and 17.

Reading machine helps disabled

People who are blind, partially-sighted or who have learning disabilities will gain greater access to information with the addition of a Kurtzweil reading machine to the Ganser Library. The machine, a combination computer-scanner, can scan printed or handwritten materials and repeat them orally. Users have a choice of various voices and speeds.

Through acquisitions such as the reading machine, the University is helping to increase access to education for people with disabilities and ensure compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). This and other efforts are being coordinated through the campus ADA Committee.

Friedan highlights Women's Center dedication

Betty Friedan

Betty Friedan, founder and first president of the National Organization for Women, urged her audience to move beyond the "victim stage" and begin working on the roots of problems such as gun control, health care, revival of the economy and child care.

Speaking on March 16 as part of the gala celebration that officially opened MU's new Women's Center, Friedan noted that the women's movement is at a critical juncture, and that solving the problems which face both men and women is essential if women's rights are to survive.

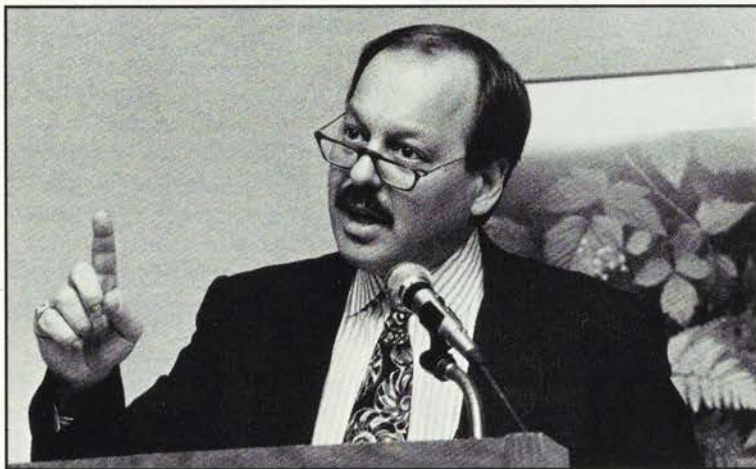

The celebrated author and feminist was on campus to help dedicate the Women's Center at Montour House. Named for Madame Montour, a woman of Native American and French descent who was prominent in American Indian affairs, the center will provide a wide range of services and support.

SPEAKERS/LECTURERS/EVENTS

African Dark Ages discussed

The genesis, persistence and eventual dissolution of Africa's own Dark Ages, and the role played by European exploration and exploitation of the continent and its people, were the topic of a lecture by Dr. Emmanuel Obiechina, an internationally recognized Nigerian scholar best known for his works on African literature.

The scholar drew heavily on history, focusing on the destructive short- and long-term effects of slavery and colonization on peoples who, in the early 1400s, were enjoying a period of prosperity, growth and development. Obiechina described Africa's current problems as inevitable in light of the long period of exploitation.

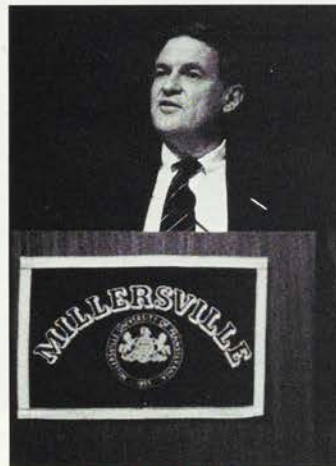

Challenging Latinos and others to confront and begin solving the social problems that afflict inner-city communities, the Honorable Nelson A. Diaz, judge of the Common Pleas Court, Philadelphia, and a self-described former "kid on the streets," delivered the keynote address on April 5 for the Sixth Annual Latino Celebration. The Celebration brought a variety of events to campus, including a youth leadership workshop for college students, a panel on U.S. trade, a Hispanic cultural fair for middle and secondary school students, and musical programs.

Russian diplomat addresses crisis

A combination of unrealistically short deadlines and high expectations has brought Russia to its current crisis, according to Ambassador Yuliy Vorontsov, Russia's representative to the United Nations and a foreign affairs adviser to President Boris Yeltsin.

Speaking on March 11, Vorontsov also discussed the obstacles to reform, the role of the Russian parliament and the power dispute between Yeltsin and conservatives. His lecture was sponsored by the Center for Politics and Public Affairs, the International Relations Club and the Multicultural Committee of the University Activities Board.

Lockey lecturer stresses involvement in schools

Dr. Theodore Sizer

Teachers, students, parents, communities, states—all must participate in the selection of curriculum and materials to be used in the nation's schools, said Dr. Theodore R. Sizer, educational reformer and founder of the Coalition of Essential Schools.

Sizer gave the fifth annual Anna Funk Lockey Lecture in Education on March 10 before some 1,000 future educators, teachers, University faculty and others, but singled out the teachers in training for his message. He stressed the need for more self-expression, rather than multiple-choice tests, and for an approach that integrates the arts and sciences rather than separates them.

The audience responded to Sizer—a winner of major awards in education—with numerous questions during the open forum that followed the lecture.

SPEAKERS/LECTURERS/EVENTS

The Alvin Ailey Dance Company brought its unique style of kinesic grace and social energy to Lyte Auditorium on February 19.

All poets need to become moral psychologists in the 1990s. This was part of the message that Sonia Sanchez, author, poet and playwright, presented in her lecture, "The Black Poet as Creator of Social Values," on February 19. Sanchez, a professor of English at Temple University, also read some of her poetry at the event, which was part of the lecture series on gender, race and ethnicity.

Evolutionary biologist calls for new understanding

Dr. Elisabet Sahtouris

Dr. Elisabet Sahtouris, evolutionary biologist, philosopher and acclaimed author, spoke of her personal journey as a scientist and called for a new, non-destructive relationship with Earth. The occasion for her talk was the sixth annual Glenna Hazeltine Women in Mathematics and Science Conference on April 1.

Sahtouris's book, GAIA: The Human Journey from Chaos to Cosmos, focuses on the new scientific understanding of Earth as a living planet and the implications for science and all human society. The work has been published in seven languages.

Sponsored by the Warner-Lambert Company and the Glenna Hazeltine Endowment, the conference encourages young women in high school to investigate careers in mathematics and science.

GRANTS/ACADEMIC ACTIVITIES

Business goes international

Responding to the rapid globalization of the economy, MU now offers an International Business Certificate (IBC) for undergraduates majoring in business or one of several other degree programs.

The program at MU emphasizes humanistic and cross-cultural aspects of international enterprises. To receive a certificate, enrollees must successfully complete 18 credits of course work in international business, foreign languages and the liberal arts.

Kise reappointed

W. Kent Kise Jr., vice chairman/treasurer of Herrmidifier Company, Inc., Lancaster, and 1992 chairman of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry, was reappointed last November as the business administration department's executive-in-residence, thus making available his expertise and experience to the University community.

Conference celebrates writing

Four keynote speakers and 16 workshops brought area educators to the University for the 46th Annual J. Richard Zerby Conference. Keynote speakers for the conference were authors Lucy McCormick Caulkins, Pam Conrad and Charlotte Weaver-Geizer, and language arts consultant Carol Avery.

"Earth" to be next theme

Earth: The Next Generation

The academic theme for 1993-94 will be "Earth: The Next Generation." According to David A. Zegers, cochairperson of the University Theme Steering Committee, the theme will encourage a year of discussion, research and introspection on the many ecological problems and dilemmas that humanity must face.

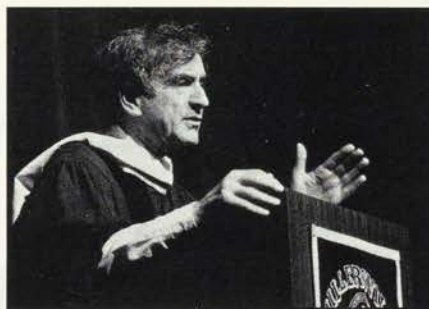

Among the many events, some of which are still being planned, are an address by Dr. Barry Commoner, a public lecture by ecologist Dr. Stuart Pimm, and various lectures, conferences, seminars. Artistic events will include ecologically themed music and art.

The logo above, designed by MU art major David Miller of Lancaster, was selected from among those of 13 entrants as the official logo for the academic year theme.

Spring enrollment down

Spring enrollment figures show 7,264 students enrolled at the University, down 123 from spring 1992. This total includes both on- and off-campus students, with 6,547 undergraduates and 717 graduate students.

Enrollment in the noncredit courses, offered both on- and off-campus, was 392 students.

Elie Wiesel

Wiesel: We must always help

"I couldn't believe this would happen and the world would be silent." Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel—author, Boston University professor, Holocaust survivor—was referring to the "strange indifference" the world showed toward the Jews of Europe in the late 1930s and into World War II.

Delivering the Aristides de Sousa Mendes Lecture at the 1993 MU Holocaust Conference on April 25, Wiesel spoke about the culpability of the indifferent bystander in the Holocaust. Citing the current victims of political atrocities in areas such as South Africa and Bosnia-Herzegovina, he told the audience that people must learn from history and help the victims.

"I stand on the side of the victim today," said Wiesel. "I must be his or her friend."

Wiesel's keynote address was part of an abbreviated Holocaust Conference. Originally set for mid-March, the conference was postponed because of the March 13 blizzard.

At the conference, Wiesel also received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from MU for his extensive work on behalf of oppressed people, a task which he has performed throughout much of his adult life.

MU PEOPLE

Caminero

Dr. Rosario Caminero, foreign languages, was elected to the Board of Directors and to the Executive Board of the Hispanic Council of Lancaster. She will also head the council's Executive Committee on Education.

Caputo

President Joseph A. Caputo was recommended "without reservation" by the MU Council of Trustees at its February 17 meeting, for extension of his contract as president of the University through June 30, 1996.

Etter

Following a formal review of Dr. Caputo's leadership, the resolution was made and the recommendation forwarded to the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education.

Dr. Ermaleen B. Etter '63, special education, retired January 8. Since joining the staff in 1968, she taught both undergraduate and graduate courses, supervised student teachers, and was quite active with the National Council for Exceptional Children and the organization's Susquehanna Chapter. She also worked with helping developmentally disabled children and adults who have hyperactive and anti-social behavior problems.

Hungerford

Nancy E. Hungerford '80, assistant professor of health and physical education, will retire on August 28. In addition to her teaching assignments, Hungerford served as chairperson pro tempore of the Faculty Senate, assistant chairperson for the health and physical education department, adviser to the Student Senate and coach of the women's tennis and junior varsity field hockey teams. The recipient of numerous awards in the field of physical education, Hungerford earned a master's degree in counselor education at MU in 1980, and has been teaching at the University since 1968.

Dr. Mary A. Klinedinst, educational foundations, was named state director for the Pennsylvania Governor's Schools of Excellence. She will be responsible for the professional and academic development of the six Pennsylvania Governor's Schools, and will serve as a liaison with other states that offer similar programs.

Dr. G. Terry Madonna, director of the Center for Politics and Public Affairs, has been chosen as a regular panelist on the statewide public affairs TV program, The People's Business.

Dr. John F. O'Donnell, English, was recently appointed by the Conference on English Education of the National Council of Teachers of English to the National Commission on Middle Grades English Language Arts Association.

Officer Joyce Galen, University Police, will be listed in the 1993 edition of 2,000 Notable American Women, which will contain information on professional women honored for service to their communities.

Dr. Dennis B. Downey, history, received an Outstanding Book Award from the Gustavus Myers Center for the Study of Human Rights in the United States, for his book, No Crooked Death: Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and the Lynching of Zachariah Walker.

Jeri Robinson, art, had her artist's books, It is difficult to spin ... and Parts of a WHOLE purchased by the Albright Knox-Art Gallery in Buffalo, NY, for addition to its permanent collection.

Dr. Robert T. Smith, mathematics, had his book, Discovering Calculus with the TI-81 and the TI-85 (co-authored with Dr. Roland Minton of Roanoke College), published by McGraw-Hill.

Everett M. Ressler, adjunct professor of sociology, had his book, Evacuation of Children from Conflict Areas: Considerations and Guidelines, released for international distribution by the United Nations High Commission for Refugees in Geneva and the United Nations Children's Fund in New York.

Deaths

Caleb W. Bucher, former professor of education and chairperson of the elementary education department, died December 8. He was 84. Bucher spent eight years at Millersville and served as director of graduate studies in elementary education before retiring in June of 1987. In addition to his work at Millersville, he had taught in one-room schoolhouses, served as an elementary school principal, was pastor of the Royersford Church of the Brethren and was active in local historical societies.

Books & More

Dr. Steven R. Centola, English, had his book, Arthur Miller in Conversation, published by Northouse & Northouse, Dallas. Another book, The Achievement of Arthur Miller, New Essays, has been accepted

Organizations: adding the missing ingredient

by Charlene Duroni

Ambassador Yuliy M. Vorontsov, representative to the U.N. from the Russian Federation and State Adviser to the President of the Russian Federation on Foreign Policy, with MU student Stephanie Oprea after the ambassador's presentation during International Week.

Of and by themselves, academic studies simply will not suffice. A valuable part of the university experience is the opportunity to work with others—professors, classmates, professionals—and learn from them outside the classroom. At MU, as elsewhere, student organizations provide an excellent counterpoint to the classroom, filling needs that are social, educational or both.

Putting business in context

For business students, the advantages of joining an organization go beyond the obvious one of making important contacts.

"It gives students an opportunity to meet with professionals who are in practice," says Dr. Douglas Frazer, head of MU's business administration department. "It's good for networking, but it is also good for the students to become aware of what is going on in the profession so they can establish some context with what they are learning in the classroom."

A number of active clubs within the business department give students this all-important context.

Danielle Roux, a senior majoring in business management and the current president of the MU chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM), is a strong proponent of participation in the club. While she acknowledges the natural tie-in with the business world, Roux also sees advantages at a very personal level. "The thing that was most important to me," she says, "was how it helped with my confidence." Public speaking, organization of activities and delegation of responsibility are just a few of the skills that Roux says she has polished in her involvement with SAM. "And it has helped me to learn to budget my time better," she adds.

Roux notes the opportunity for networking within the business community through various other SAM chapters. SAM has also instituted what is referred to as a "shadow program" that pairs a student to someone already working in a given field. The student is able to spend the better part of a day with the person, getting to see what really goes on in the work world. "I think this is a particularly valuable program," she says.

The friendships that come out of the organization are an added bonus, according to Roux. "It gives you a feeling of belonging and a group that you can identify with."

Eyes on the world

For students of international relations, the perspective is a global one, and the need to maintain it is constant. MU's International Relations Club helps these students keep the world in perspective.

Although activities are scheduled throughout the year, they culminate in March, a very busy month for the members of the International Relations Club, as the members celebrate International Week. The 6th Annual International Week, held from March 8 through 13 of this year, brought members together for events as varied as lectures by distinguished personages and charitable activities to help the less fortunate on the far side of the world.

This year's theme was "Lend a Helping Hand," so club members organized a clothing drive for the orphans of Croatia, and they sold tee-shirts and pens to raise money to send to Somalia.

Among the week's distinguished speakers were Ambassador Yuliy M. Vorontsov, representative to the U.N. from the Russian Federation and State Adviser to the President of the Russian Federation on Foreign Policy, and Abdullah Harad, special appointee for the U.N. Development Program for Somalia.

In the midst of all the activities, club president Stephanie Oprea took time out to talk about the International Relations Club and some of its goals. "Basically we are trying to make the international students who come to MU more at home and familiarize them with American life," she explains, adding that club membership is open to both foreign and American students.

Oprea, a native of Romania, is a junior majoring in international studies. She came to the U.S. with her family in 1985. She credits the club for helping to ease her transition to university life.

A host of club-sponsored activities, including trips around the country and to Canada, keep members involved and busy. Oprea says the organization currently numbers about 80 members, 50 of whom are very actively involved.

To Oprea, the experience with the

Through such interactions, the future teachers begin applying the theory of the classroom to real-life situations.

MU senior Danielle Roux (left) learns first-hand about management from Mary Miskey, employment manager at Lancaster General Hospital. The learning experience is part of a "shadow" program instituted by the Society for the Advancement of Management, a University student organization.

International Relations Club is an important adjunct to her studies, one that will help her achieve her goals: a graduate degree in political science and, eventually, a position at the U.N.

Returning from a luncheon with Ambassador Vorontsov, Oprea is beaming.

"Just the contact with everybody has been incredible," says Oprea. "I am grateful for everything I have learned."

A head start for teachers

Not surprisingly, the club for those who will teach young children emphasizes service by its membership.

Dr. David Bird, adviser to the Early Childhood Education Association (ECEA), describes it as a pre-professional club that also has a strong service component. "Each member is required to accumulate eight service hours a year," Bird explains. "We do a lot for the Jenkins Center and the Lancaster Area Association for the Education of Young Children." Over the years the club has also worked with many local organizations such as the Lancaster Day Care Center, Hands-On House and the S. June Smith Center.

Tracy Wolfe, a junior majoring in early childhood education, says her involvement in the association has been very beneficial to her overall career goals. Wolfe, a native of York, would like to stay in the area and get a job teaching in the primary grades.

The ECEA meetings every other week provide a variety of speakers and some very interesting topics—from outcome-based education to aerobic fitness for the young child. "We deal with some of the important issues," she points out, "but we also do things that are technique-oriented, or just for the fun of it. Often we deal with topics that we don't cover too often in class."

"It has helped me see a lot of different views of education," says senior Kristy Rebnecker, current president of ECEA. "A very positive experience. I would recommend it to all the early childhood majors on campus."

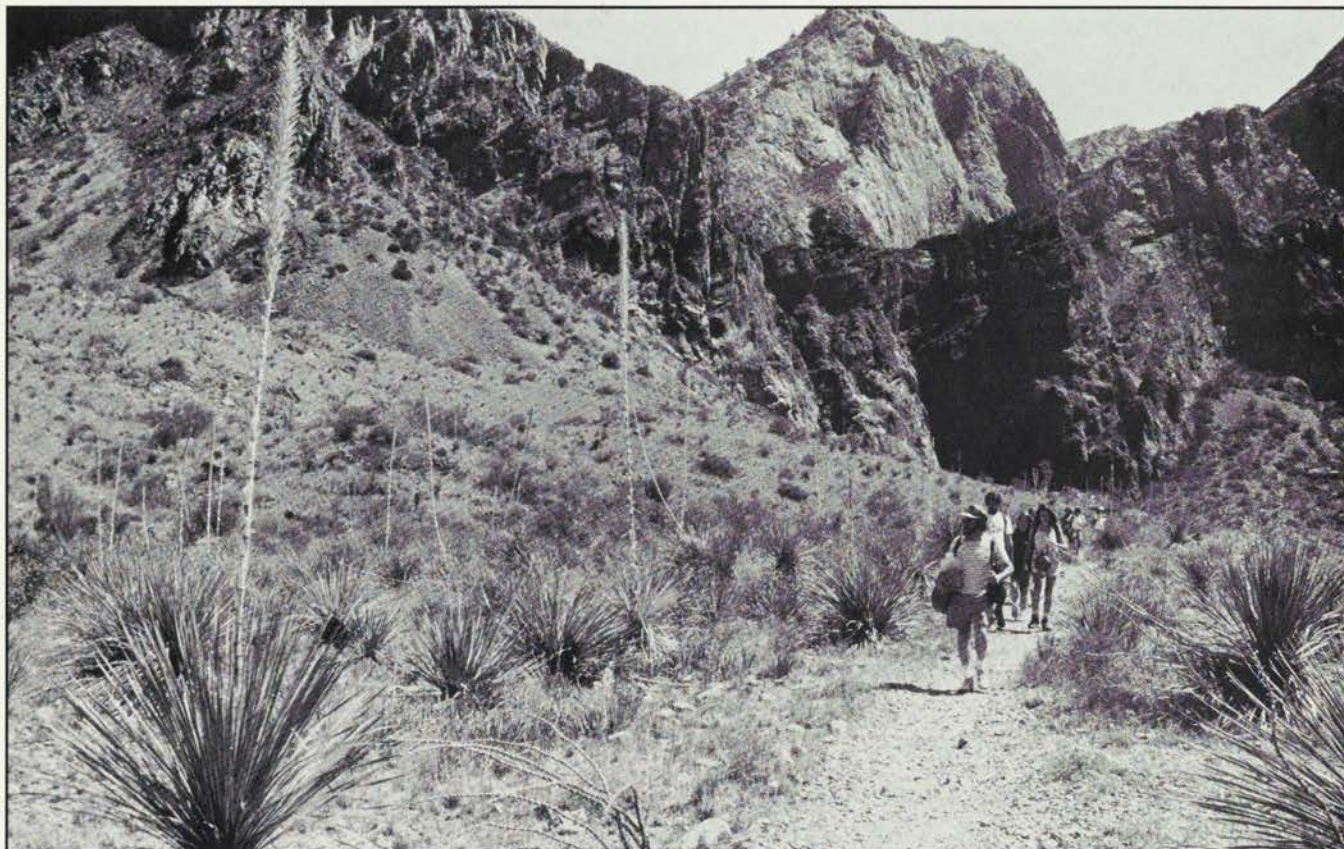

The association sponsors several workshops and holds an annual spring carnival at Stayer Hall for children from the community. A semi-annual newsletter keeps students and alumni apprised of current activities.

Wolfe, who was the club's historian last year and is currently the corresponding secretary, has been under some friendly pressure to run for president during the next school year, according to Dr. Bird.

"They tell me it's not as much work as some of the other jobs," she says with a laugh. 🍀

Beyond the classroom

In the scheme of things, a classroom is a tiny place, a scant sliver of the human experience. To make great things happen in that small space, a good teacher finds a means of connecting the stuff of textbooks—at times abstract, obscure and minute—to the world which begins unfolding outside the classroom door and where the overwhelming majority of students will make their contributions.

Dr. Syd Radinovsky, biology, enjoys taking students out to meet that world and giving them a chance to apply their classroom-acquired skills in a real-life situation. In particular, he likes taking students to Big Bend National Park, where the Northern Chihuahuan Desert spills into West Texas. There, they can experience and study the flora and fauna that inhabit a varied topography stretching from high desert and the Rio Grande Valley to mountains covered in piñon pines and dotted with stands of quaking aspen.

Less amenable to the microscope but easily accessible from the park is rural Mexico, where life proceeds on different terms without much of the technology that the typical Millersville student takes for granted.

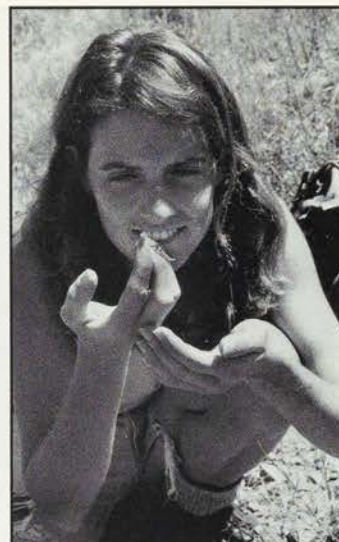

Accompanied by University photographer Jim Yescalis, Radinovsky and 10 students, members of the MU Entomology Club, set out on Friday, March 19, for a marathon, 42-hour drive to Big Bend. They arrived on Sunday, spent the week of spring break at the park and returned to campus on Sunday, March 28.

Rather than distract the reader with too many words, we will allow Yescalis's photographs to tell the bulk of the story. 🌵

Senior Tina Powell admires a branded gecko.

Arriving at Chisos Basin the group sets up camp.

Tough and forbidding, ocotillo — devil's whip — typifies the local vegetation.

Senior Ron Swatski sketches a mountain scene.

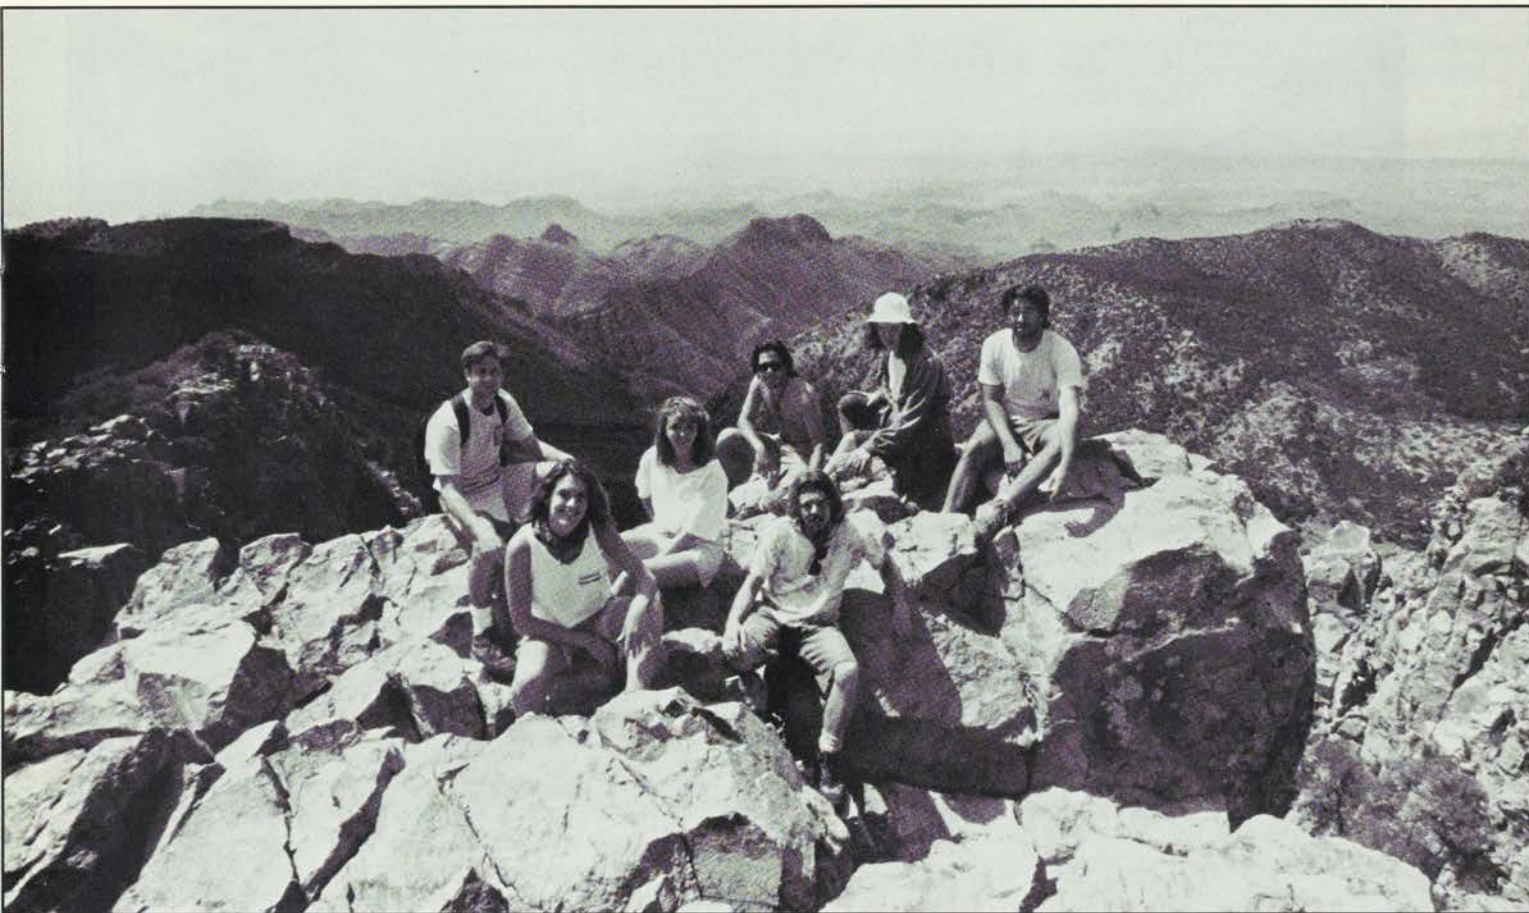

The benign and the menacing: A reticulated gecko and a scorpion were among the creatures that were collected, studied and released.

A cool refuge from the desert heat—Cattail Falls.

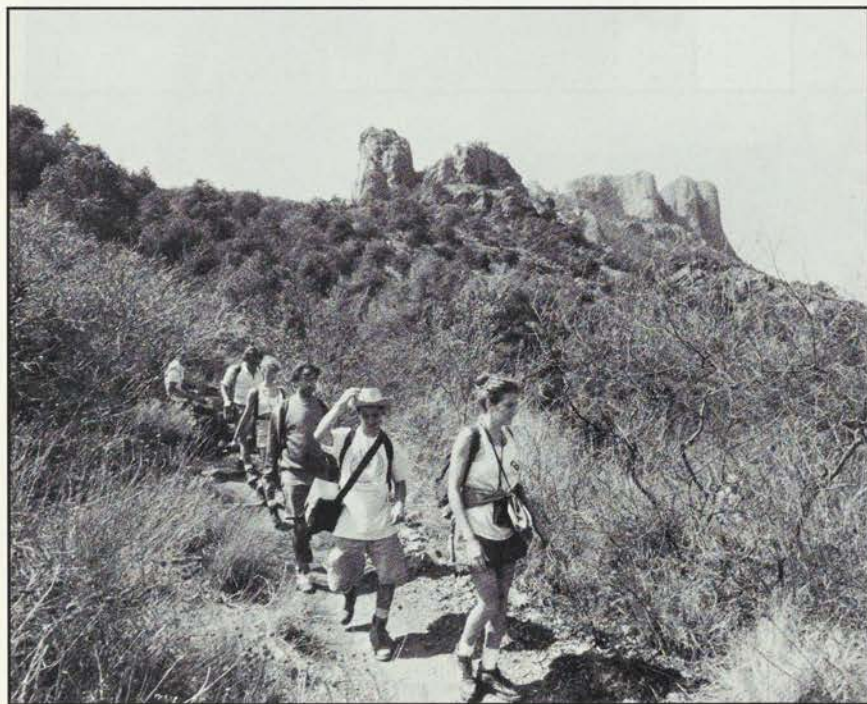

Rocks, as well as plants and animals, were among the reasons for pausing along the trail.

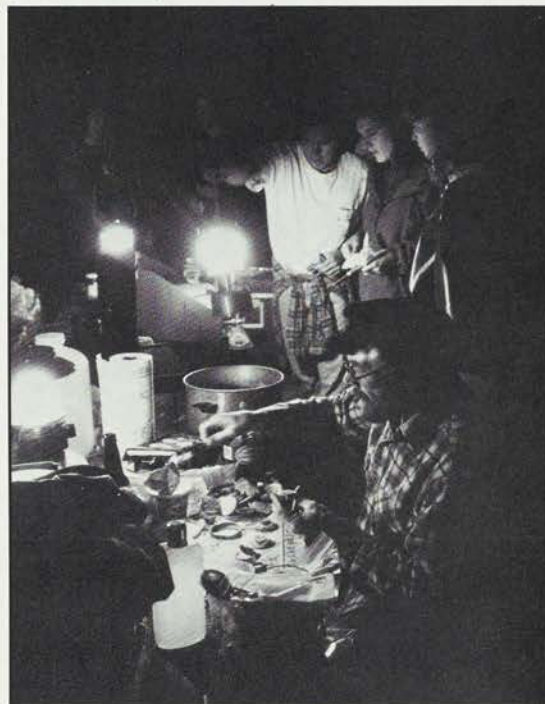

Atop 7,800-foot high Emory Peak, the group rests after a 3-1/2 hour ascent.

From the mountains to the desert floor—a splendid contrast.

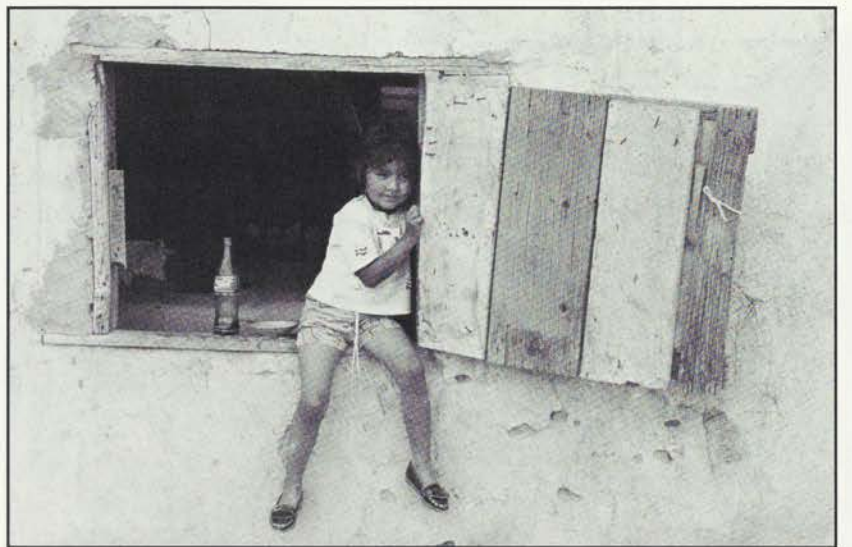

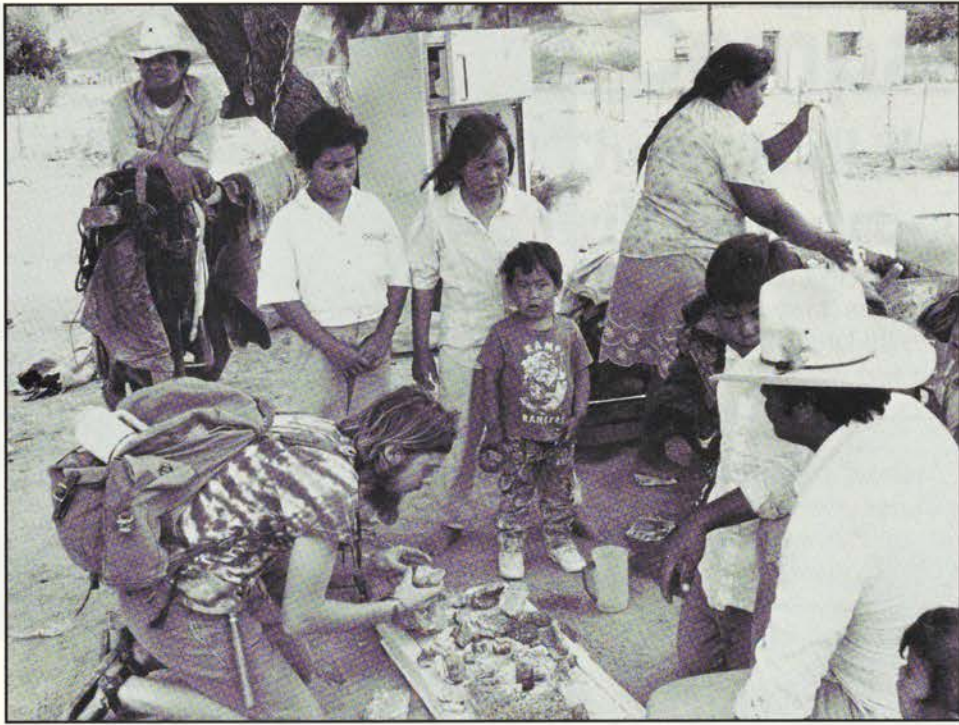

In the night kitchen, replenishing the energy reserves for the next day.

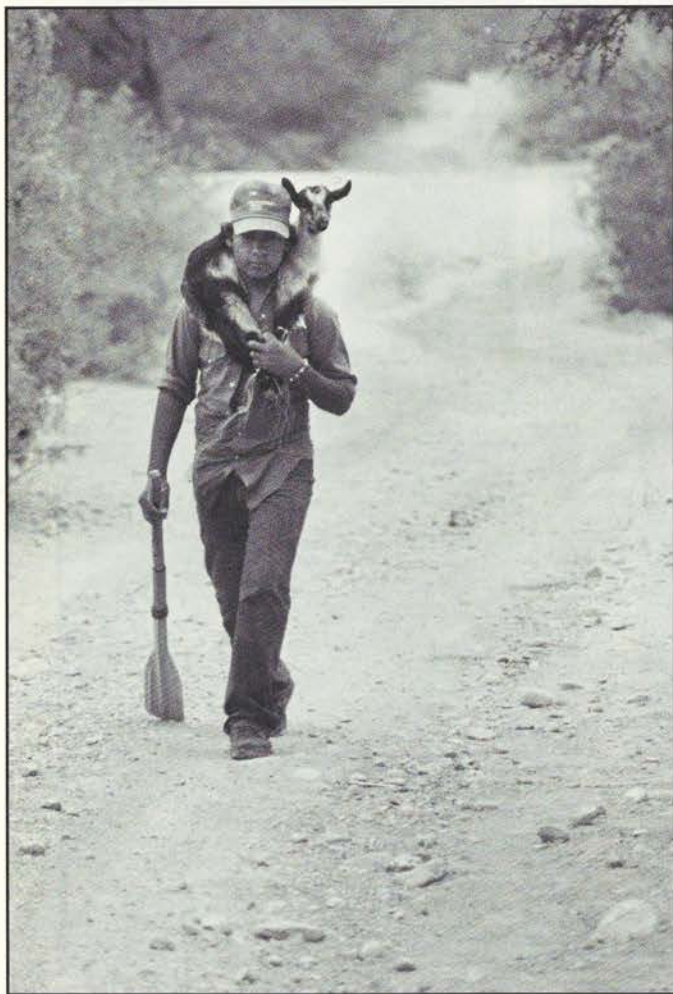

A boundary between two worlds, the Rio Grande flows through Santa Elena Canyon. The group crossed the river twice, at Santa Elena and at Boquillas, into rural Mexico. More than one student said, "I wasn't prepared for this."

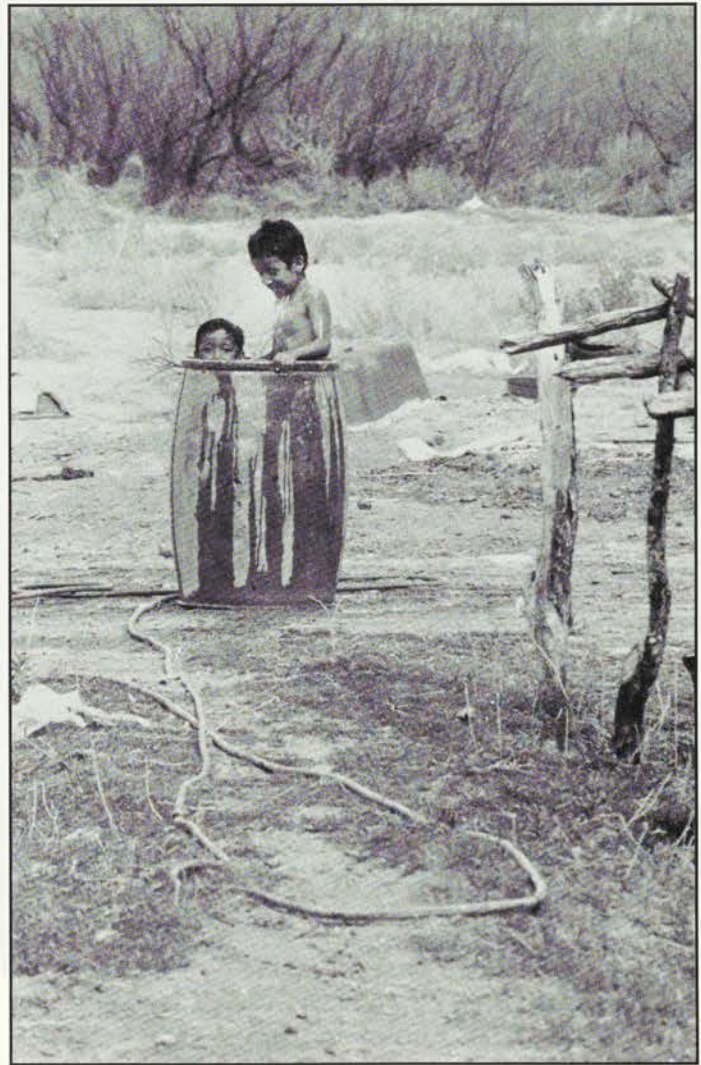

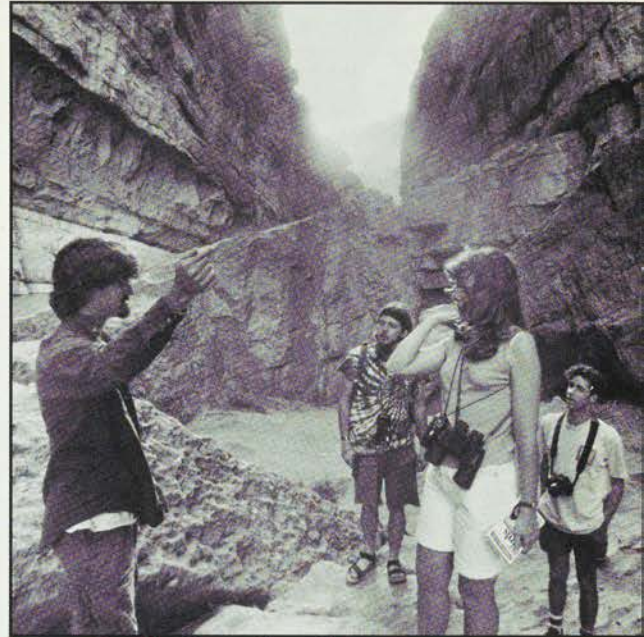

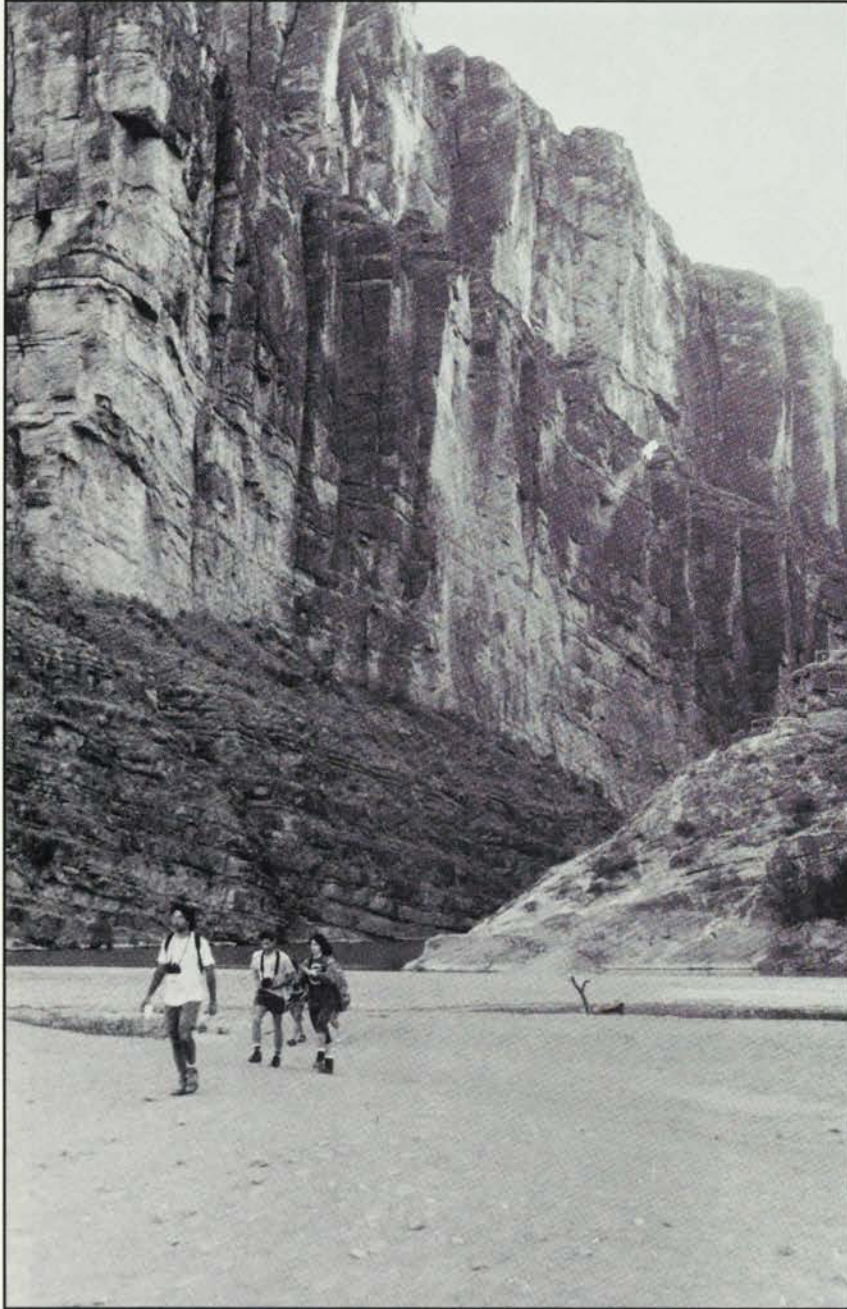

Sophomore George Mummert barter with the locals for geodes in Santa Elena, Mexico. The sale of rocks is an important source of income both here and in Boquillas.

Scenes from Mexican village life: a young boy carries a kid home; two brothers enjoy a cooling dip.

Heading out of Santa Elena Canyon.

Ranger Sam Fleishman shares his experiences with the group. (Fleishman is the son of Diane Fleishman, MU's director of Cooperative Education.)

The trip back—another 44 hours in the van. Everyone agreed it was worth it.

Chryst Hall dedicated; will support communications

When J. Freeland Chryst, class of 1950, was a student, as he tells the story, he would hitchhike, bum rides and take the bus to get to campus. That bus stop is now the site of Chryst Hall, named in honor of the former commuting student who returned to Millersville on April 23 for the dedication ceremonies.

In a presentation that was a complete surprise to the recipient, President Joseph A. Caputo bestowed a President's Medallion upon Jay Chryst, citing his service, leadership and dedication to the University.

Surrounded by more than 100 family members and friends, Chryst was feted by President Joseph A. Caputo, Provost Benjamin Taggie, English Department Chair Cynthia Dilgard, Capital Campaign Chair Herman Armstrong and Council of Trustees Chair Sally Vanderslice. In a surprise presentation, President Caputo bestowed the President's Medallion on Chryst for extraordinary service, leadership and dedication to higher education at Millersville University.

he was extremely impressed to have his name on a building at Millersville. "Look at the buildings on this campus — Dutcher Hall, Myers, Bassler, McComsey, Biemesderfer — I knew those people," he said.

A former history teacher and football coach, Chryst is founder of The Jay Group, a multi-faceted, multi-million-dollar service and sales promotion company based in Ronks, where he is now chairman of the board. He is also a member of the MU capital campaign cabinet, serving as chairperson of its Leadership Gifts Committee.

The Alumni Association: Setting an example of dedication to MU

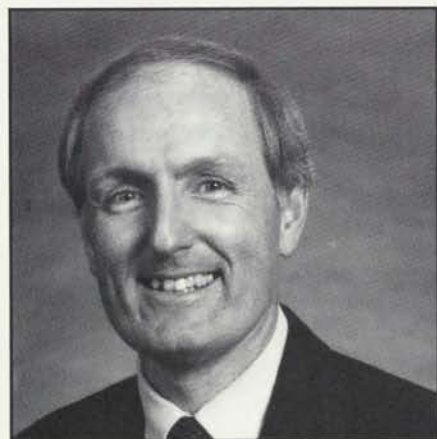

"We needed to set a good precedent for the capital campaign," says Alumni Association President Stephen Focht. "The council has a long history of involvement with the University. With the launching of the capital campaign, we wanted to provide a good example for others."

The precedent is the Alumni Council's sponsorship of renovations to Lyte Auditorium—specifically, a $100,000 gift to be paid over five years, used mainly for the restoration of the Alumni Organ and related renovations.

The Alumni Association originally raised money to purchase the three-manual Reuter pipe organ in 1956. At that time, it was considered one of the finest pieces owned by an institution of higher education in Pennsylvania.

"In this century alone, alumni have contributed over $1 million in support of the University," notes Steve DiGuseppe, alumni services director.

DiGuseppe goes on to list many of the larger and ongoing projects funded by the association: the renovation of the old library, now Biemesderfer Executive Center, the Alumni Bell Tower, contributions to the senior class gift program, and class gifts.

Through this gift and their continued support, MU alumni show the leadership that will help the University grow into the next century.

Cooper named to campaign cabinet

Insurance executive Bennett J. Cooper, class of 1967, has joined the capital campaign cabinet.

Bennett J. Cooper
Member, Capital Campaign Cabinet

"Ben brings his good business sense and strong loyalty to Millersville to our endeavors in the cause of this campaign," said Campaign Chair Herman Armstrong, vice president for operations at Warner-Lambert.

A history/political science major, Cooper married foreign language major Joanne Wargo, also class of 1967. The couple has two children.

Cooper is a lawyer and chief executive officer of CM Financial Group (Connecticut Mutual Insurance) in Pittsburgh, the company's largest office outside of its home office in Hartford, Ct.

Rettew Associates establishes geology scholarship fund

Radon gas, the geology of Antarctica and the future of Lancaster County wetlands were all topics of conversation at a breakfast meeting to finalize the newly established Rettew Scholarship Fund at Millersville University.

George "Hank" Rettew, president of Rettew Associates, an environmental engineering firm in Lancaster, joined MU president Joseph A. Caputo to celebrate the establishment of the endowment fund in December 1992.

Eventually, the endowment will fund scholarships for geology students who demonstrate outstanding academic achievement.

"Join the President" hits the road this fall

President Joseph A. Caputo plans a full schedule of visits to alumni groups this fall, when he continues the "Join the President" tour to discuss the capital campaign and the state of the University.

He has already logged several thousand miles, visiting groups in California and Florida, in addition to many of the Pennsylvania branches.

This summer, President Caputo will likely travel to Denver and Washington, D.C., meeting with local groups of alumni and friends.

Watch for a full schedule of these visits in the fall issue of the Millersville Review.

Showdown in Mudville

They brought their grubby clothes, old sneakers and team spirit. The University provided the equipment, some organizational assistance and help in preparing the site.

Nature provided a cold, cloudy day, and an untimely rainstorm turned the muddy court into a deep puddle.

It was MU's first-ever oozeball tournament—an event for only the brave and the hardy.

The intrepid group—eleven co-ed teams of 6-8 players, mostly students with some MU staff—gathered at a site behind Lenhardt and Burrowes Halls to vie for the University's first oozeball championship.

It was all for a cause: the Class of '93 Senior Gift. Teams paid $30 for the privilege of entering the event, held on April 17. After miscellaneous costs were deducted, the gift fund had grown by about $320.

Oozeball arrived through the instigation of Heather Prevatt, senior elementary and early childhood education major and co-chairperson of the Senior Gift Committee. "I was at a conference in New York," Prevatt explains, "and I saw all these people wearing oozeball shirts. I asked and they were so excited about oozeball!"

The championship team for the event comprised Brian Stevens, Matt Grexa, Scott Mader, Tara Reader, Tim Slyhoff and Diona Staino. They each took home official MU mugs as their prize.

After pledging temporary insanity, team captain Stevens avers that "they should do it every year, especially if it's warm."

Onward through the ooze. They got cold feet and still had a great time! MU students, a hardy lot, braved an unseasonably cold spring day and an unexpected pool of water to raise money for the senior gift.

Class of '93 gift: a gazebo by the lake

A gazebo by the lake will be the gift from the Class of '93 to future generations of students and the MU community. The gazebo is to be built in memory of those students who died during their years at Millersville.

"We want to commemorate our years on campus as a class, and we want to honor the memories of classmates who died during their time with us," explains Heather Prevatt, co-chairperson of the Senior Gift Committee and a May graduate.

Co-chairperson Jim Young, also a May graduate, adds that the seniors "developed the gift idea because we wanted something tangible that could be completed quickly and would have an impact on campus."

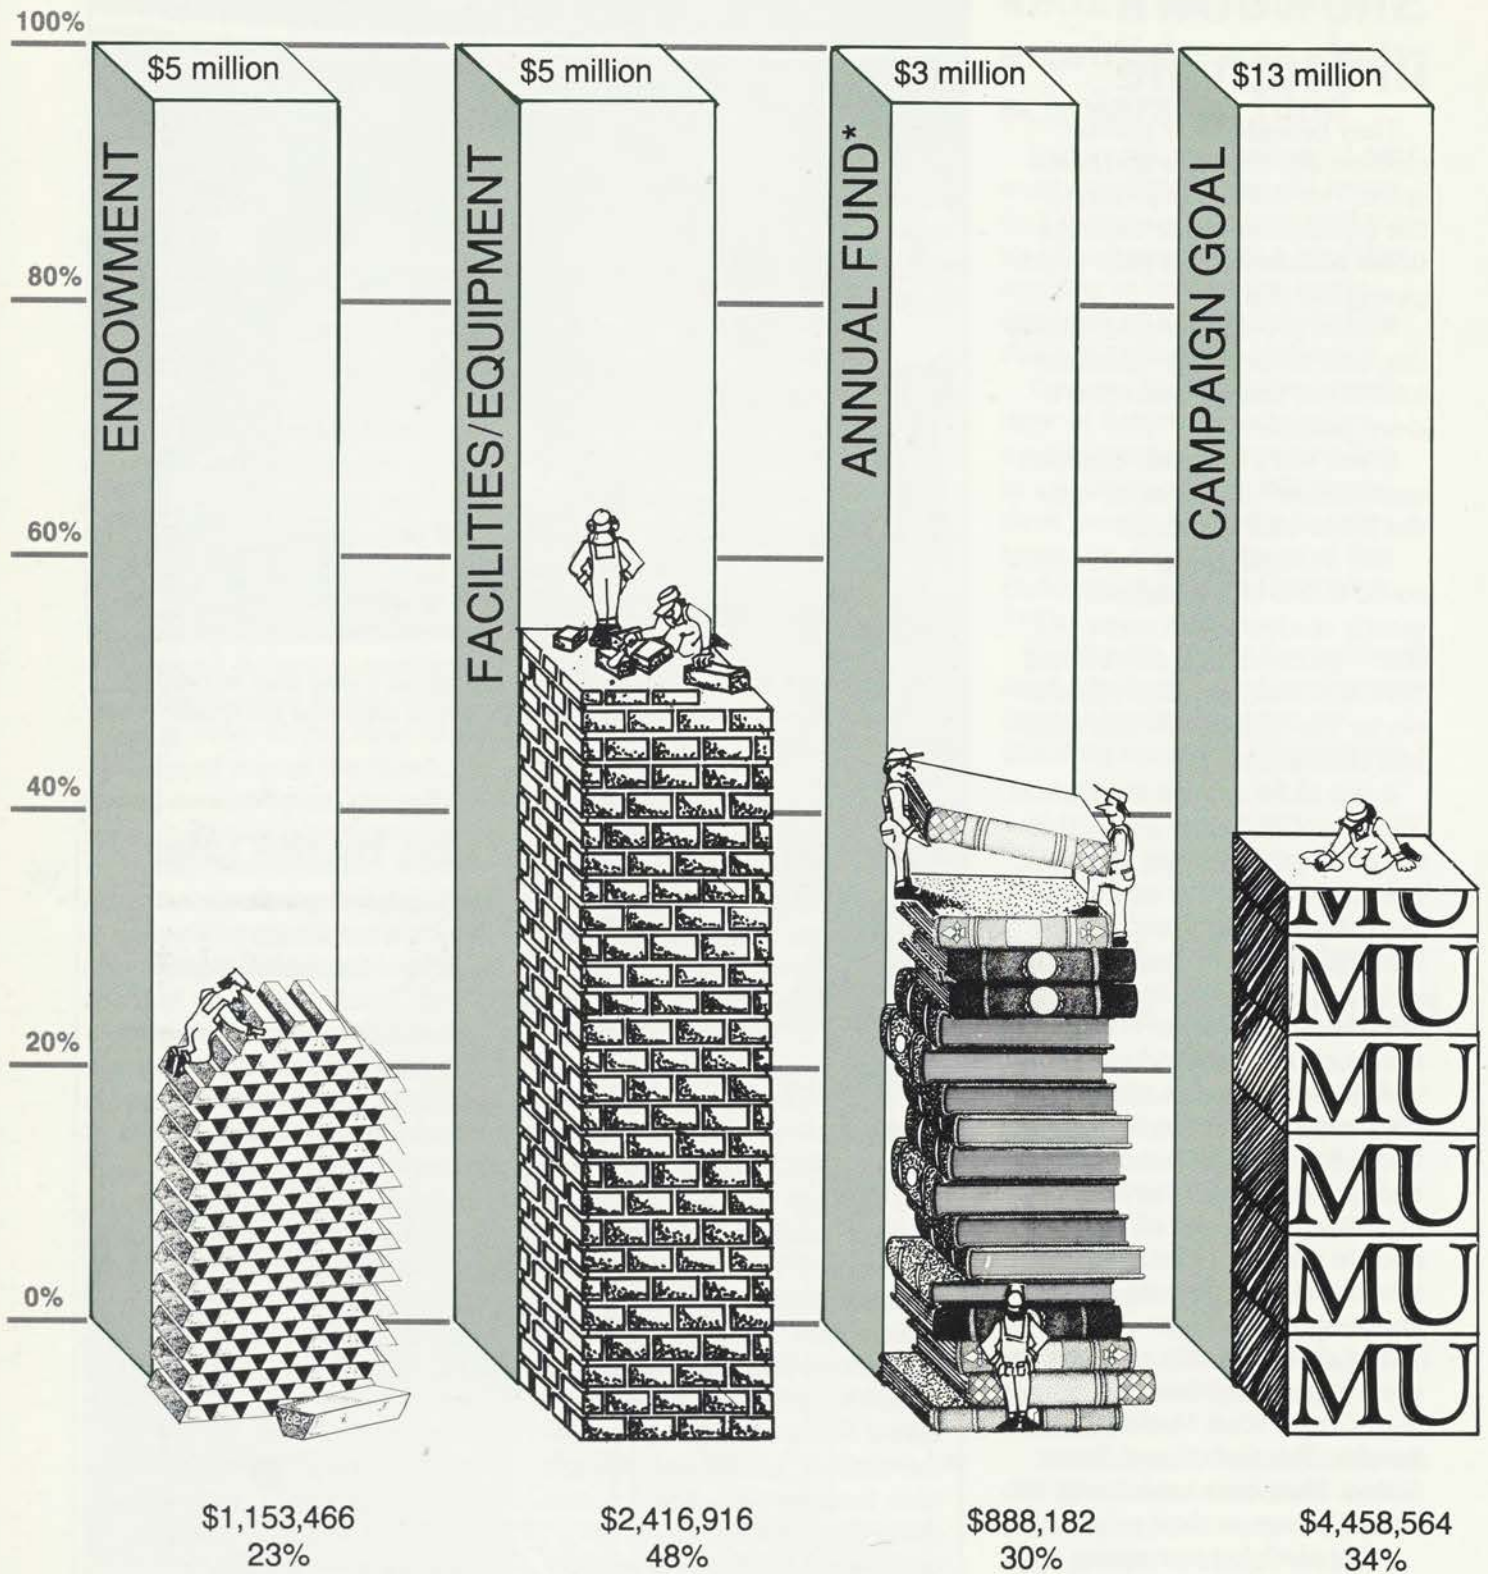

The group of about a dozen or so seniors that chose the project wanted in particular to honor the memories of David Wellborn, Stephanie Wojcik and Cullen Cutrell.

Martha MacAdam, Annual Fund Director and adviser to the committee, notes that all concerned want the Senior Gift to cover the entire cost of the gazebo. "We have looked into the costs, and we are sure that the $4,500 goal is sufficient to pay for the entire project, which includes landscaping, laying a foundation and the gazebo itself."

As of April 23, the Senior Gift Fund was at a very healthy $4,300, just short of its goal of $4,500. The Senior Gift will be formally presented to the University during the May commencement exercises, with the gazebo to be built within a year.

Update: Meeting the Commitment

These figures represent both pledges and funds received through April 30, 1993, compared with the total goal.

* This amount includes $216,828 in competitive grants in support of campaign objectives.

OF ALUMNI INTEREST

MU by the beach

Calling all aspiring beach bums, vacationers or those folks who just want to spend the day in Avalon, New Jersey . . . the Alumni Association is sponsoring its annual Young Alumni Beach Party, to be held at the Princeton Bar and Grill on Saturday, August 28, 4-8 p.m. Call or write your colleagues and have them meet you at the party in Avalon. The Princeton is located at 2008 Dune Drive.

Last year, over 100 MU alumni and guests turned out for this first-time event. Alumni have requested that this become an annual event. Various other State System schools and other colleges sponsor similar events at beach resorts.

A buffet of hot and cold happy hour foods, special drink prices and music with a disc jockey will be offered for a $5 cover charge with advance mail-in reservations ($6 at the door). The first 200 alumni who register by mail will receive a free MU mini-sport bottle with koozie. A flyer will be sent (in late July) to alumni who have graduated between the years 1980 and 1992, and who live in Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania counties of Bucks, Montgomery, Lancaster and York, and New Jersey. All alumni are welcome, even if they did not receive a flyer. If you do not receive one and would like to, call the Alumni Office after July 30.

Meet you at the beach!

Coming soon - the MU sweater

Millersville has entered an agreement with Leoniak, Ltd., of Lancaster, to purchase a 100 percent cotton sweater with a special woven logo. The sweaters will be sold by the Millersville University Alumni Association and can not be bought at the University Store. Orders can be placed via the Homecoming Brochure (to be mailed in late August/early September) or by contacting the Alumni Office at 717-872-3352.

The sweater is made in the USA, with the design woven into the fabric, not sewn or embroidered. The cost of the sweater has not been determined, but a likely price range is $34-40. At press time, the design had not been finalized. The top choices for color scheme are black, gold and creme, or teal, white and navy blue.

MU license plates get green light

The word is "Go!" With over 450 positive responses to the MU license plate, the project is moving forward into the next phase: selecting a design.

The Alumni Office has solicited plate design concepts from several University-related groups. Designs currently being reviewed include:

Biemesderfer
Executive Center;

reflecting tree; the Myers Hall cupola; a swan; and the 'Ville logo. Expect a final design decision by early summer.

We will send flyers in the fall of 1993 to alumni, current students, parents of current students, faculty and staff of the University who are Pennsylvania residents. The flyer will include a rough sketch of the plate design, along with an application to be completed by the person in whose name the car is registered.

Please note that, per the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, specialized plates (e.g., handicapped, veterans) will not be available as MU license plates.

Alumni Fellows Program and Career Forums complete another successful year

Two alumni were designated Alumni Fellows for 1992-93. In November, Dr. Cheryl Dellasega '81 represented the nursing department in a one-day on-campus event for students and faculty. Dr. Dellasega is an assistant professor of nursing at Penn State University. Dr. Richard Todd '38, professor emeritus at East Carolina University, was designated as the history department's Alumni Fellow for 1993.

Two Career Forums were held in 1992-93. In October, a Career Forum in Psychology attracted over 100 psychology students. The panel members included Claudia Blackburn '80, executive director, Caron Family Services, Lancaster; Charlene Bryson '76, training coordinator, Community Services Group, Lancaster; Glen Acker '73, psychologist, Psychological Associates, Lancaster; Loren Amsell, Ph.D. '85, assistant director of psychology and principal clinical psychologist at North Princeton Developmental Center, New Jersey.

Over 40 students attended the Career Forum in Foreign Languages. The panel members included Lori Barkle Hess '90, Spanish teacher, Middletown Area School District; Susan Godwin '92, New Peace Corps volunteer; Gregory Ferree '91, freelance translator; Mara Anderson '68, German teacher, Ephrata High School and assistant professor of foreign languages, MU; and Dane Runkles '77, freelance translator.

Spring Neimeyer-Hodgson Grants announced

Ten Millersville University students received Neimeyer-Hodgson Research Grants, totalling $2,475, from the Alumni Association in April. The Neimeyer-Hodgson Fund provides grants-in-aid for student research.

Following is a list of the students, their home towns and the field of study for which they were awarded the grant.

- Robert Bentzley, Lancaster, examining the role that physiological arousal plays in high and low test anxious individuals.
- Christopher S.M. Dallis, Lancaster, the cine-semiotic investigation of the manifestation of 18th century Romantic/aesthetic preoccupations in American films during the early 60s through the early 70s.

- Thomas E. Denlinger, Christiana, racial factors affecting the diagnostic process.

- Shirley Anne Finkelston, Lancaster, developing a rapid isolation and an electrophoretic analysis of red blood cell membrane proteins which can be used in a research or a teaching laboratory.

- Simon T. Fickinger III, Lancaster, master's thesis on the nature of worry and its relationship to emotional processing theory.

- Sandra Knaub, Washington Boro, master's thesis, "Failed Females or Real Heroines? Aspects of Androgyny in the Young Women Characters of Carson McCullers."

- Edie Johnston, Mt. Gretna, master's thesis on stereotypical views of Native Americans.

- Heather C. Lynch, Philadelphia, isolation of fats from foods and the subsequent analysis of the products.

- Keith M. Sims, Landisville, the role of cyclic AMP in glutamine synthetase gene expression.

- Gail L. Reed, Manheim, investigating SEAgel. Its previous use and preparation were classified by the military, but now the procedure for preparation of SEAgel has been released.

- Caroline Stein, Hazleton, and John Mohn, Jonestown, learned helplessness as measured by explanatory style and its correlation with achievement and health.

Alumni Network will point students toward careers

Want to help an MU student make a good, well-informed decision about a career? Hook up with the Alumni Network, a corps of alumni who will provide MU students with advantages such as: informational interviews; "shadowing" opportunities, where students can observe a person at work for a day or two; mentoring in a long-term, advisory capacity; and possibly an internship or co-op experience, where the student can obtain professional work experience on a short-term basis.

The Alumni Network is a cooperative effort by the MU Office of Career Services, the Office of Alumni Services and the Alumni Services Committee of the MU Alumni Association, which are pitching in to give our students the support they need in order to make a smooth, successful transition from academia to work.

If you can help guide a student toward a good career, please fill out the questionnaire (found between the inside back cover and the last page) and mail it in. Your help will make a big difference in our students' lives.

African-American/ Latino Reunion Weekend calendar set for 1993

Plans have been set for the 1993 African-American/Latino Reunion Weekend, June 25-27. Last year's activities provided a great opportunity for alumni to return to Millersville and renew old acquaintances and meet new friends.

This year we have planned several activities, including a welcome reception Friday evening in the Hull Hall Rec Room, a picnic lunch at the Alumni House followed by an all-alumni Greek Step Show, a dinner/dance Saturday evening with DJ Dean Preston spinning his tunes from 9:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. and a farewell brunch on Sunday.

Newly added are four seminars to be offered in the recently expanded and renovated Student Memorial Center. Topics will be "Building an Investment Profile for the Future," "Cultivating the Entrepreneurial Spirit: African-American/Latino Business Opportunities," "Legal Issues in the Work Place," and "Building a Professional Profile Through Community Volunteerism."

Brooks Gymnasium will be open for the basketball game, while the University Store and Game Room will be open in the Student Memorial Center from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Those who wish to stay for the weekend will be housed in Hull Hall. You may come to one event or for the entire weekend. Note: An individual price list has been set.

Flyers with detailed information and pricing will be mailed in late May/early June. Should you not receive a flyer and are interested in further details, please contact the

Unitrusts: beneficial to all

As a service to our readers, the Review is presenting a series of brief articles on the various means by which individuals or organizations can give to the University and support its educational mission. The following was written by Lee Eastwood, director of planned giving at MU. For more information, call (717) 872-3820.

Maximizing one's assets, protecting what one has, planning for a secure future—these are immediate and vital concerns even during the best of times. During difficult economic times, these concerns turn into an important question for many people who want to help the University achieve its educational aims. In brief, how can individuals provide for their needs and still offer significant financial support to the University?

I have an excellent answer: through a Charitable Remainder Trust.

The concept is simple. A donor places money or property with the University Foundation, with instructions to pay someone (usually the donor) an annual income for a specified period of time (usually for life). That income is a set percentage of the trust's value. The percentage will not change, although the actual income may vary as the value of the trust increases or shrinks. Upon the death of the donor, the remaining property—the remainder—passes to the Foundation.

In addition to receiving long-term income from their gift, donors benefit from a deduction on their income tax for a charitable contribution. Depending on the arrangement, they may also benefit from reduced capital gains taxes, estate tax savings and reduced estate settlement costs.

EXAMPLE: Alice, 62, contributes $100,000 to a unitrust, with the agreement that she will receive 7 percent of that amount ($7,000) each year. Because she funded the trust with cash, in the first year Alice can take an income tax charitable deduction, deductible up to 50% of her adjusted gross income, or she can take the deduction over five subsequent years.

Unitrusts have withstood the test of time as a giving vehicle for preserving assets and assuring income into the future. Entered into with the University, a unitrust is a tangible sign of a trusting relationship from which both University and donor benefit. Through it, donors can support the programs and objectives of Millersville University and still satisfy their personal and family financial needs.

Involvement and dedication

Dontina J. Jackson '75 doesn't let a single good idea escape. "I invested in a microcassette recorder," says Jackson, "so I can record a quick note to myself. And even if I have a good idea while I'm dreaming, I'll wake up and write it down."

As principal of Wyncote Elementary School, Jackson knows that good ideas are resources and that no resource should be wasted in the effort to educate America's children. She is also a firm believer in parental involvement, which was the topic of her doctoral dissertation.

"I enjoyed writing my dissertation, which used information from the School District of Lancaster," she states. "When I taught at Southwest Elementary (now Martin Luther King), I was a strong advocate of parental involvement. I made home visits twice a year, and I had a contract with parents for them to come in at least once a year. This is because, once you have involved parents, you have a better child—emotionally, socially and academically."

A Lancastrian and Cheyney graduate who received her master's degree in education from Millersville, Jackson taught at Southwest Elementary in Lancaster, and she was a track coach at McCaskey High School. When she elected to go on for her doctorate, she resigned from the coaching position which she had held seven years, a difficult but necessary move. In 1989, she was awarded a doctoral degree in education from Temple University.

Seven years into her principalship, Jackson is more involved than ever. "I try to make mine a personal relationship with the children by learning about each child and his or her personality."

Jackson also provides the children opportunities to get to know her. Teachers reward the children's good behavior with coupons which buy lunch with Dr. J (Jackson). Ever the teacher, she also runs Dr. J's Lunchtime Reading Program, to build a critical skill.

Looking toward the future, Jackson knows she wants to teach at the college level, but for the interim, the challenges and satisfaction fill her waking moments—and even her dreams. As Jackson so quietly puts it, "I know I'll be here for a few years to come."

Searching for a greater understanding

What do you do when you love science but crave a greater understanding? Tina Dochat '90 stepped back and absorbed the big picture first.

"I'm interested in many different things," she says unassumingly. Fortunately for science, Dochat's curiosity received strong support from Paul Nichols, MU professor of earth sciences, who encouraged his student to satisfy her intellectual hunger. The logical match for Dochat's eclectic nature was a major in philosophy, not in one of the earth sciences.

"After I graduated, I took geology courses at Millersville for a couple of years," she explains, "and then I went to the University of Maine, where they have an excellent program in glacial geology. I'm studying with Dr. George Denton, one of the half-dozen or so experts in that field."

Dochat received a singular honor in her first-year as a graduate student when she was selected to travel to Antarctica to do original research. Only about 1,000 people live and work on the frigid continent during the peak of the season. For a first-year graduate student to be among these is nothing short of remarkable.

Her work, categorized by Nichols as "revolutionary," focuses on the latest Antarctic glaciation, using penguin bones to establish a chronology and determining the origins of boulders (erratics) deposited by glaciers. Her research is part of a larger project on the stability of the Western Antarctic Ice Sheet. The project is of universal interest because of the water trapped as ice in this sheet; were it to melt or fragment and thus return to the ocean, it would cause catastrophic flooding of coastal areas around the world.

After her successful field experience, Dochat returned in January to the University of Maine to continue her studies and analyze the data gathered during her field experience.

An interesting note: Upon arriving in Antarctica, Dochat found that another MU alumna, Peggy Klinedinst '87, was training for Antarctic work, too. Klinedinst, one of MU's first female meteorologists, is doing National Science Foundation funded research in the Antarctic.

MARAUDER SPORTS

An enduring season

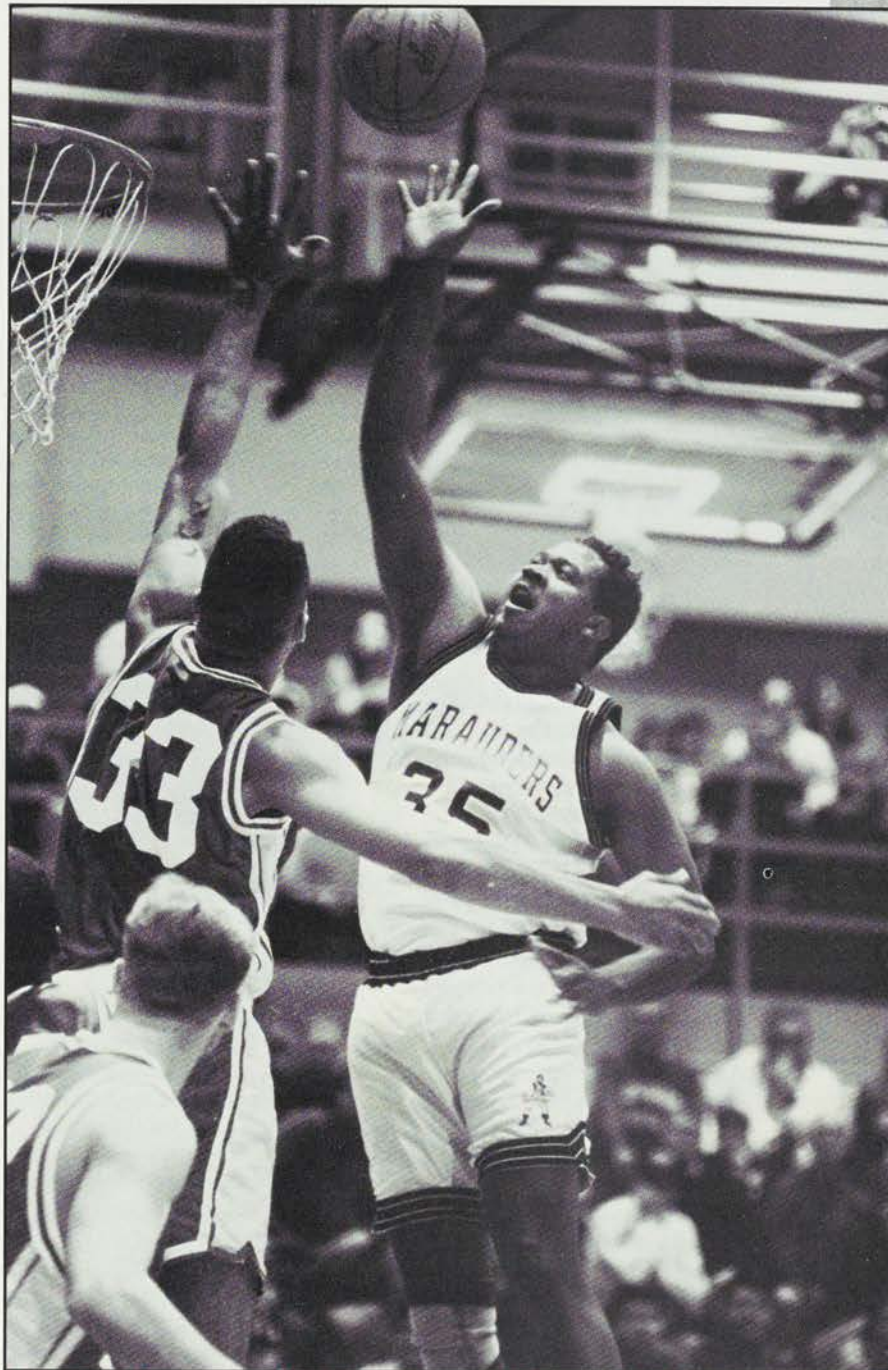

Much like the winter of '92-'93, the Marauders proved surprisingly tenacious. Several of the winter sports teams endured well into post-season championship play, giving MU sports fans a special treat that helped dispel the gloom of a lingering winter.

Men & women cagers take PSAC titles

After a period of blowing snow and several postponements, the men's basketball team ended its season hosting the PSAC and NCAA Division II East Regional Tournaments. After earning the PSAC Eastern Division title with an 11-1 record, the Marauders beat California (Pa.), the tenth-ranked team in the nation in the NCAA-II, 97-84, for the PSAC Championship. Then the Marauders advanced to regionals where they lost in the final round, 70-62, to Philadelphia Textile, the number two team in the NCAA-II, and finished with a final record of 24-6.

Seniors Kenny Brown, a guard, and center Jon Dunmeyer led the 'Ville in scoring with a 19.8 points per game average. Dunmeyer, the PSAC East Player of the Year, was the squad's top rebounder with 224 boards. Both Dunmeyer and Brown were named to the All-PSAC East first team and the All-NCAA Division II East Regional Tournament team. In addition, Brown earned All-ECAC Division II second team honors and Dunmeyer was selected for the Basketball Times' NCAA-II All-American second team and the All-ECAC Division II South first team.

Senior forward Vance Crawford was next in scoring with 11.0 ppg. Jim McClintock, a junior point guard, will return next season as the Marauders' playmaker after leading the squad with a .471 three-point field goal percentage, 134 assists and 52 steals. Sophomore forward Antwine Moore is also expected to come back next year after rallying the crowd in the Marauders' self-proclaimed "House of Pain" with 46 blocked shots.

The women's basketball team extended its regular season after earning co-ownership of the PSAC Eastern Division title, its first since 1985, with a 10-2 conference record.

Although the squad fell in the first round of the PSAC Tournament, 94-65, to eventual champion Clarion, the Marauders highlighted their season with several strong individual performances.

Senior point guard Paula Light, the PSAC Eastern Division Player of the Year, was second in scoring with a 12.3 points per game average. And, she led the team with 69 steals and 201 assists. Light, who also earned NCAA Division II All-American honorable mention and was named to the All-PSAC Eastern Division first team and All-ECAC Division II South second team, ended her final season ranked first in assists in both career (597) and season (201) marks. She also set an MU record for most steals in one game with 10 against Longwood College and finished second in career steals and free throws made.

Closing their final season at Junior guard Kristin Schneider, led the team in scoring with a 15.5 ppg average, including a team-high 58 three-point field goals, and she set MU records in both three-point field goals made and attempted in a single game with six and 14, respectively.

MU, senior forwards Karen Fox and Cathy Busha were instrumental in the Marauders' success by providing leadership for the team. Fox led the squad with 183 rebounds and 24 blocked shots while Busha was a dependable reserve and team motivator.

Kristin Schneider, a junior guard, led the team in scoring with a 15.5 ppg average, including a team-high 58 three-point field goals. An All-PSAC second team selection, Schneider set MU records in both three-point field goals made and attempted in a single game with six and 14, respectively.

In addition to the return of Schneider, the team can also count on the leadership of junior guard Carol Flinchbaugh. Flinchbaugh, who sat out six games due to an injury to her index finger, is second in career marks at MU in three-point field goals and free throw percentage and she's ninth in overall scoring with 976 points.

Wrestlers repeat championship

The wrestling team had another outstanding season as the squad repeated as the NCAA Division I Eastern Regional Champions with a team record of 142.5 points. Five grapplers qualified for the NCAA Division I National Championships held at Iowa State University. Among them were three seniors. An All-American at 142-pounds, Tom Barley had a 29-11 record this season to finish his career with a 108-39-1 record; he posted two second place finishes at the PSAC Championships and the NCAA Division I East Regionals. Mark Lawton, the PSAC champion at 167-pounds, was 21-7 for the season and 103-47-1 in his career. Scott Kindig, the winner of the PSAC title and the NCAA-I East Regional runner-up at 118-pounds, was 22-9 this year and 82-39-2 in his career.

Juniors Tac Thomas and Brian Troop also qualified for nationals. Thomas, wrestling at 177-pounds, placed sixth at the PSAC Championships and was the NCAA I East Regional champion. Troop, who wrestled at 150-pounds, finished sixth at the PSAC Championships and won the NCAA-I East Regionals. Barley, however, was the only one to make it to the second round at Iowa State.

Junior Jeff Witwer and sophomore Jim Schopf did not qualify for nationals this year, but they both had successful seasons and are expected to be among the Marauders top returning letterwinners next year. Witwer was the 134-pound runner-up at the PSAC Championships and the 126-pound runner-up at the NCAA-I East Regionals. Schopf was the regional runner-up at 134-pounds.

All-American Tom Barley had a 29-11 record this season to finish his career with a 108-39-1 record, posting two second-place finishes at the PSAC Championships and the NCAA Division I East Regionals.

Swimmers set new records

The women's swimming and diving team ended its season with a winning record of 6-5, an eighth place finish at the PSAC Championships and ten new MU records.

Newcomer Irene Mullen led the team in rewriting the record books with five of her own best marks in the 200-meter breaststroke, the 100- and 200-meter butterflies, and the 200- and 400-meter individual medleys. Another freshman, Becky Paull, had three season bests in the backstroke events including a new mark in the 200-meter backstroke. Junior

Val Brooks set season bests in four freestyle races and two breaststroke events, including a new record in the 100-meter breaststroke.

Three new standards were also set in the relays. Paull, Brooks, Mullen and sophomore Chrissy Walklett broke records in the 200- and 400-meter medley relays and Brooks, Mullen, Walklett and senior Dina Laumer set a new mark in the 400-meter freestyle relay.

successful indoor season with several competitors finishing in the top six at the ECAC Division II Indoor Track and Field Championships. Junior sprinter Carol Purdy was the women's only double winner with a fourth place finish in the 55-meter dash and fifth place in the 200 meters. Other top-six finishers included seniors Beth Chaundy and Cathy Heistand, junior Karen Gentzel and sophomore Jo Rupp. Winning the 3,200-meter relay was Heistand, Rupp, sophomore Amy Moore and freshman Erin Carey. Sophomore Drew Rountree, named the Most Outstanding Field Athlete, led the men's team with first place in the 35-lb. weight throw and the shot put. Another sophomore, Carl Hahn, was second in the 35-lb. weight throw and third in the shot-put. Dave Dietz, a senior, took third in the 35-lb. weight throw and fourth in the shot put. Senior Jim Michener was fourth in the pentathlon and sixth in the long jump.

In the running events, sophomore Kevin Schadt was the 1,500-meter champion and the 1,000-meter runner-up. Scott Mack, a freshman, won the 55-meter dash and took fifth in the 200 meters. Sophomore Sherman Barnes finished third in the 400 meters and sixth in the 200.

Barnes, Mack, sophomore Andrew Nock and freshman Dan Esposito won first place in the 800-meter relay.

Alumni honored at football banquet

Four Millersville University graduates received recognition for outstanding football achievement and continuing excellence at the 16th Annual Football Awards Banquet held in February.

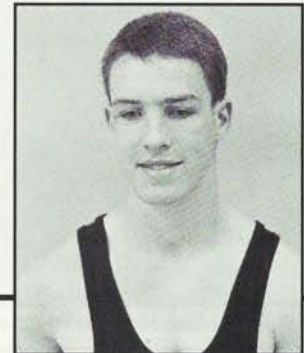

They were Carl Borst, Lt. Col. William Davis, Ray Garganes and John Schleyer.

Borst, a native of Clearwater, Pa., played for MU from 1968-70. He is currently based in Connecticut as an account executive for marketing for Hallmark Cards.

Raised in Philadelphia, Davis was a Marauder from 1969-71. After serving in the Persian Gulf War and being awarded the Legion of Merit, he became the Branch Chief of Special Forces for the U.S. Army Personnel Command.

Garganes played two seasons for Millersville in the early 70's. A Hershey native, he is employed at Penn National Race Course and serves as a union representative.

Schleyer, who played from 1968-1970, is from Richboro, Pa. An active game official for the National Football League, he owns his own medical distribution company.

Patrick Leahy

Please, no inspiration

by Shelly Brittain

He would prefer that the story be about another member of the wrestling team, perhaps about a teammate with over 100 career wins. "I can't stand the inspirational stuff," protests freshman Pat Leahy. "If I inspire somebody, fine."

By "inspirational stuff" he means the attention drawn to his vision. Leahy is almost completely blind. Although he can see images and some color, he has only a little peripheral vision and no central vision. He consented to the story in order to spread the word about the team, and if it helps motivate somebody who doesn't see well to play sports, all the better.

"It isn't unusual for me to play sports," says Leahy, who has participated in swimming, gymnastics and downhill skiing. He grew up in a family that loved playing sports, and they made the adjustment so Leahy could be an active participant.

Not surprisingly, his participation is no big deal to Leahy. Maybe that's why the redshirt is having such a good year, enjoying his time on the mat while earning a 3.4 GPA.

A summer sampler

A salmagundi of selected titles for summer reading—leisurely or otherwise

Summer's here, and for many of us that means a chance to slow down, take a vacation, maybe even pick up a good book to read at the beach or in the back yard.

We took a very unscientific poll to see what kind of literature—highbrow and low—the campus community will be reading this summer. Here's a sample from the MU Summer '93 Reading List.

- Dr. Mel Allen, Philosophy
Outrageous, by Charles Barkley; Sex in History, by Reay Tannahill
