THE CENTER FOR HEALTH EDUCATION AND PROMOTION
Volume 1, Issue 5 | 2024-2025

GRAND OPENING!

Wednesday, January 22
at 11am-2pm

The Nest - Commuter Lounge
The new commuter lounge in the SMC is an essential part of the university's broader vision for supporting commuter students by fostering a sense of community, improving student well-being and addressing the unique challenges commuter students face. Giving commuter students a "home-base" on campus where they can rest, recharge, study and socialize aids in creating a sense of community and belonging.

Are you experiencing SAD?

Symptoms:

- persistent low mood
- loss of interest in activities
- low energy and fatigue
- changes in sleep patterns like oversleeping
- changes in appetite, cravings for carbohydrates
- difficulty concentrating
- feelings of hopelessness
- feelings of worthlessness
- thoughts of self-harm or suicide

Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD) is a subtype of depression that follows a seasonal pattern, typically emerging in late fall and early winter and remitting during spring and summer. This condition is believed to be linked to reduced sunlight exposure, which can disrupt the body's internal clock (circadian rhythm) and lead to biochemical imbalances.

Treatment Options

- Light Therapy: Exposure to bright artificial light for about 20 to 60 minutes each morning. This therapy aims to compensate for reduced natural sunlight and has been shown to alleviate symptoms in many individuals.
- Psychotherapy: Cognitive Behavioral Therapy helps individuals identify/modify negative thought patterns and behaviors providing coping strategies.
- Medications: Antidepressants address chemical imbalances in the brain contributing to depression.
- Vitamin D Supplementation: Given the association between low vitamin D levels and SAD, supplementation may be beneficial.

Start the Semester Strong!

1. Find a study zone. Even if your course is offered online, you'll need more than a laptop to do your best work. Find a place with limited distractions and noise levels conducive to concentration, like a quiet corner in your home or a local library.
2. Train your brain. Your brain is just like any other muscle in your body. The more you exercise it, the stronger and more agile it will be. Set up routines to help you be successful in school and work.
3. Connect with classmates. We're all in this together. Study groups can be a great way to explore challenging course concepts. Classmates can hold you accountable to deadlines.
4. Know your resources. Schedule an in-person, email, or Zoom appointment; most tutors meet regularly on campus and online.
5. Make a plan. Determining what comes first and what can wait until the term is over will help you keep your sights in focus when your to-do list starts growing.
6. Ask questions. Get ahead of potential problems and issues by asking questions right away. Whether you have questions about a specific assignment or project, or you need assistance with the course material, it's always best to ask your professors and get the help or clarification you need.
7. Visit the Center for Counseling & Human Development. Situated on the 3rd floor of Lyle Hall, the Center supports the mission of the University by enhancing students' emotional, social, and personal development. Services include individual counseling, group therapy, crisis intervention, light box therapy and psychiatric services. Call 717-871-7821.
8. Visit Health Services. Located in the Witmer Building, Health Services provides medical care and health education to students. Services include evaluation and treatment of acute illnesses, mental health concerns, injuries, women's health services, sexually transmitted infection testing and treatment, and laboratory services. Appointments can be scheduled with physicians, nurse practitioners, or registered nurses. Call 717-871-5250.
